

Índice/Contents

Archaeology, Faunal Analysis, and Interpretation: Lessons from Maya Studies. Arlen F. Chase, Diane Z. Chase & Wendy G. Teeter
Teasing Out the Species in Diverse Archaeofaunas: Is It Worth the Effort? An Example from the Tropical Eastern Pacific. Richard Cooke & Máximo Jiménez
In Search of the “Maya Diet”: Is Regional Comparison Possible in the Maya Tropics? Kitty F. Emery
Snake Consumption among Early Inhabitants of the River of Grass , South Florida, USA. Arlene Fradkin
Identification of Morphological Variation in the Humeri of Bornean Primates and Its Application to Zooarchaeology. Kimarnie Ki-Kydd & Philip John Piper
Marine Resource Exploitation and Diversity in Kahikinui, Maui, Hawaii: Bringing Together Multiple Lines of Evidence to Interpret the Past. Sharyn Jones O’Day
Estudio Arqueozoológico en Los Buchillones. Economía y Medio Ambiente. L.R. Pérez Iglesias; J. E. Jardines Macías & C.A. Rodríguez Arce
What Kind of Data Are in the Back Dirt? An Experiment on the Influence of Screen Size on Optimal Data Recovery. Irvy R. Quitmyer
The Ones That Come Ready Made: The Identification and Use of Sus Tusks As Tools at Prehistoric Cave Sites in Malaysia. Ryan J. Rabett
Revisiting the Senga 5a Fish Fauna, Upper Semliki River, Democratic Republic of Congo. Kathlyn M. Stewart
Adding Flesh to Bones: Using Zooarchaeology Research to Answer the Big-Picture Questions. Wendy G. Teeter & Arlen F. Chase
On the Paramount Importance of Adequate Comparative Collections and Recovery Techniques in the Identification and Interpretation of Vertebrate Archaeofaunas: A Reply to Vale & Gargett (2002). Thomas A. Wake
Stable Isotopes and the Human-Animal Interface in Maya Biosocial and Environmental Systems. Christin D. White
Conclusions: Suggesting Solutions to the Issues of Tropical Zooarchaeology. Wendy G. Teeter
Book Reviews
Announcements

